MOKENA RESIDENTS

HEAR FROM ADOPTED YANK

Mr. and Mrs. John Marti of Mokena who recently adopted a Yank have received the following letter from him:

Sunday Night,
Dear Mr. and Mrs. Marti:

As it is impossible for me to thank you personally I am taking this means of conveying my sincerest thanks and appreciation for the wonderful gift you sent me.

The cookies were just like my mother used to bake and better fudge could not be bought in any sweet shop. I shared them with a couple of my buddies and they enjoyed them equally as well as me. As one of them said, "they're stupendous."

You will never know the joy and gladness that kind hearted and considerate people like yourselves are bringing to "the boys in Blue" as well as thousands of others in other branches of the country's armed forces. I am only giving my views but I know that I speak for every mother's son of us. And with people like you back home pulling for us I know we can't lose.

Thanks again for the delicious cookies and candy. After we have eaten the Japs and Nazis I might be around for a second helping of them.

Sincerely and thankfully, Your adopted Yank,
Clay Anderson, Great Lakes, Ill.

Prizes Awarded In Mokena Christmas Lighting Contest

The Christmas home decoration contest sponsored by the Mokena Civic Association was so well participated in by the residents of the community this year that the judges found their task of selecting winners difficult. The selected winners were: First Anton Benson, Lighted church with ringing chimes.

3rd, Mrs. Rene Guindon, large entrance wreath with Christmas Gift Box.

The contest was limited to home decorations and winners were selected on three main points:

A. Artistic composition.

Special mention was made of the beautiful Christmas tree on Front Street which was sponsored by the Civic Association, under the direction of Mr. Chas. Rose, chairman of the Decorating committee. The tree was 27 feet high and had nearly 100 large sized colored bulbs and was floodlighted on all sides. The tree was enclosed within a fenced area bordered with large electrical lighted candles appropriately decorated.

Saves Lives of Women Caught Between Trains

What might have been a great tragedy was averted by the proverbial hairs breath last Tuesday evening when three Mokena residents had very close calls of being killed when caught between two trains near the depot in Mokena.

An east bound suburban train pulled in about 5:40 o'clock and Mrs. Barney Hostert and Mrs. A. J. Gore mother of Mrs. John Fox of Mokena alighted from the train near the flag shanty on Mokena street. Mrs. Gore tripped and fell just as a west bound Rocket was approaching.

Harry Schoen the crossing flagman was still on duty and seeing the jeopardy in which the women had been placed jumped across the tracks and yelled to the brakeman of the suburban train to stop the train which he did. Mr. Schoen backed both women up against the side of the coach of the train and placed himself in front of them as the streamliner whizzed by. This train failed to stop at all. All three persons suffered greatly from the excitement and shock as there was only about a foot and a half of space between the two trains.

Had Mr. Schoen not been able to brace himself as he did, all three might have been sucked under the stream liner. A great deal of credit is due to the heroism of Mr. Schoen who actually saved the two women from a horrible death. The incident was reported to the officials of the Rock Island railroad and a few days later an investigation was conducted at Blue Island and it is understood the engineer of the streamliner has been removed from service.

It is understood the streamliner had only partially slowed its speed and was going about 50 miles an hour when it passed the standing train on the opposite track. These two trains have been meeting at Mokena for sometime. If the east bound suburban train happens to get into the vicinity of the depot first the streamliner is signaled and slows its speed to give the passengers time to alight safely.

If the suburban train is a little late they usually proceed slowly toward the depot to give the streamliner time to clear. It is hoped that the railroad will advance the time of either train so as to prevent their meeting at the depot and thus endangering the lives of the passengers alighting or boarding the suburban train.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

WNU-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT FIVE

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Watson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate and fortune of her grandfather, Garrett Watson, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. Here she meets Richard Wayne, or Tonga Dick, as he is known throughout the South Pacific. He is a member of the Wayne family that has been in control of her grandfather's island, Alakoa, since the old man's disappearance. Although Tonga Dick knows who she is, Karen attempts to conceal her identity from him. Dick offers to take her sailing and she accepts. Dick, himself has not taken much of an interest in the island estate, but his half-brothers, Ernest and Willard, are very worried lest Karen's claims be valid. Next day as Dick takes Karen sailing she learns that he knows who she is and that he is taking her to Alakoa. She wants to go back to Honolulu but he refuses to take her. Although she is thrilled by the sight of the deep water island, Alakoa, Karen is afraid of what awaits her here. Dick finds that his uncle, James Wayne, is very ill. When Dick sees him, James Wayne is upset over the pending suit for the island and tells Dick he will under no circumstances come to a settlement.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

A slim Hawaiian girl called Lilua had shown Karen her room; and now this girl was back again tapping at the door panel.

"Yes?"

"Mister Dick wants to know if you would like to have coffee with him." Uncertain, Karen Watson opened the door. Tonga Dick was surely the last person in the world she wanted to see.

As she hesitated Lilua moved across the room and closed a case-mat that Karen had opened, and Karen experienced a sharp annoyance. There was no air of service in the Hawaiian girl's movement or in her face; rather there was a faint irony in Lilua's eyes, as if she condescended to assist a helpless person who didn't know how to take care of herself.

Karen put a cigarette into an ebony holder, lighted it, and studied Lilua impersonally. Lilua had the creamy brown skin of the pure Hawaiian; her softly waved hair, black as any night, was drawn back over her ears, brushed severely.

"How old are you?" Karen asked suddenly.

Lilua's unwavering eyes seemed amused. "Eighteen. How old are you?"

If Karen had conceived Lilua to be in any way less than her equal, that idea was evidently not shared by Lilua. Karen turned away.

"Somewhat older," she said shortly. "Tell Mr. Wayne I will come."

"I'll show you where he is," Lilua said.

Karen turned to look at her, impelled by that steady gaze. "You're glad to see him back, aren't you?" Karen said.

Lilua hesitated perceptibly, but her quiet voice did not change as she answered. "I haven't seen him for two years."

Karen, her annoyance unaccountably increased, followed Lilua through the house.

Dick Wayne was stretched out before the fire in the big room whose immense doors opened upon the valley and the fog; Lilua immediately crossed the room to close those doors. Dick rose, looking apologetic.

"I hope you'll make yourself comfortable here. I'm sorry if you feel I've made things awkward for you. I think I'll be able to take you back tomorrow."

"Good."

In the stiff silence between them, Lilua came and stood in front of Dick's chair, looking at him steadily.

"Dick, you must be careful of this night. I don't like this night at all. E makani auanei, he kau mai la ke kakai o Kakaipali."

"That's rude, Lilu," Dick stopped her. "You know she can't understand that."

Lilua cast a contemptuous glance at Karen, and she did not translate; but she went on in English.

"Pretty soon the clouds are going to rise higher, and the wind is going to blow through. And then it is going to rain, and even the rain is going to be a bad rain."

Dick pulled at his cold pipe, his eyes morose upon the fire. "Don't think much of it myself," he admitted.

"The wrong gods are walking," Lilua said now. "The right gods never walk here any more. Remember how we used to hear them walking? But they haven't walked here for a long time. Something else is here instead. Sometimes I can feel it coming near. And tonight it is very close, terribly close; and even the dog is afraid."

Dick Wayne stirred restively. Perhaps he thought he knew what it was that was near; but he didn't want to look at it, yet. "You'd better go to get some sleep, Lilu."

"Dick, this is a wrong time."

"Wrong time for what?" Dick snapped at her.

Lilua glanced at Karen, but what she said next was unintelligible.

"Dick," Lilua said, "Kai-Ale-Ale has been seen again. He hasn't been seen—Dick, he hasn't been seen—since my grandmother died."

Dick Wayne took time to explain this to Karen. "There's a big shark," he put in, aside, "that the natives think is a god. I've never seen it, but they swear it's as big as a ship."

"I suppose it amuses you," Karen said, "to make out that my grandfather was a great fool."

"Kai-Ale-Ale is here again," Lilua said; "and there's another thing. The red mullet are running. Dick. Ever since the Islands first came out of the sea, when the red mullet have run a king has died."

"You'd better go on to bed now, Lilu," Dick said.

"You won't want me any more tonight?"

"No; we have everything we'll need, I think."

Lilua stood motionless a moment more. "Are you sure?"

"Yes, yes, of course!"

When Lilua was gone Tonga Dick Wayne sat looking into the fire, saying nothing; and Karen found herself unwilling either to look at him or to speak.

"Do all your servants call you by your first name?" Karen asked at last.

Dick frowned a little. "She isn't exactly a servant. Her people were a very proud people—masters of this island before any haole ever saw it. And she—she's lived here all her life, and I've known her all her life."

"I don't believe," Karen offered, "that that girl has had her eyes off of you one moment since you've been in this house."

Dick Wayne looked startled. "Huh?"

"You don't mean to tell me that you didn't notice that?"

For a moment Dick looked worried. "Bunch of nonsense," he said.

"Can it be possible," Karen asked, "that she believes all that—that stuff?"

"Of course. Different races have different ways of talking about the factors that make things happen."

"Well—" Dick hesitated, and visibly shifted ground. "Well, it seems to me extremely remarkable that you and I are sitting here tonight, together by this fire."

"It is through no wish of mine," Karen said.

"I'm sorry. I still can't understand why you're not interested. For one thing, this might very well have been the house in which you were born. The room you are to sleep in tonight might have been the very room."

"I thought of that."

"There's a lot of history in this old house," Dick went on. "Of course the most interesting part of it, or at least the most highly colored, goes back to your grandfather's day, before you were born at all—before the Waynes came in. In his day the house was never silent and empty, as it is now."

"You Waynes have certainly turned it into a tomb."

"I'm sorry, sometimes," he said, "that those old days are gone. There are things that are rigid, and dull too, about the Wayne regime."

She looked at him and the shared moment broke up. "How do you know all this?"

"The Waynes were very close friends of Garrett Watson."

"To the profit of the Waynes," Karen said with repressed bitterness.

Tonga Dick shook his head, not in denial, but in objection. "Your grandfather ended up utterly broke. You see, he was the last of the great old catch-as-catch-can traders. Island trading was a tough game after the sandalwood gave out, but Garrett Watson had a tremendous robust energy, and he made himself two or three fortunes. But all that was over a good many years before he sold Alakoa. I doubt if he had made a cent for at least a decade. He had no business judgment; even his ownership of this island was an accident. He won Alakoa in a poker game with the native king—and even that was partly by mistake, because he thought he was gambling for just the fishing rights. He was actually astounded when he found out he had won it all."

"I suppose it amuses you," Karen said, "to make out that my grandfather was a great fool."

"You shouldn't mind," Dick smiled. "You and John Colt are trying to establish that he was an imbecile."

Karen bit her lip; she was silent for a full minute, and when she spoke she took an entirely new tone.

"I have no idea what you expected to gain by bringing me here, but—"

"You are here," Dick said wearily, "because John Colt sent you cruising with me, to find out some things he doesn't know. You can't imagine it, but certain affairs are a good deal more important to me than John Colt's spying processes."

"If you think," Karen snapped at him, "that either John Colt or I have the least interest in you what-ever—"

"I think you have," said Dick. "For one thing, I can tell you this—your case is never going to come to trial."

"It's already on the calendar! Nobody can stop it, now."

"I can," Tonga Dick told her. "Ask yourself, Karen, just what John Colt is so anxious to learn."

Karen Watson flushed. She could have ignored the cool conviction of Dick Wayne's words; but now she was wondering just what John Colt had suspected—and feared—that had made him so unnecessarily curious about Tonga Dick. And she was wondering why she herself had ever been such a fool as to match wits with this cool, hard-bitten man, whose purposes she could not understand. It seemed very long ago that she had made herself believe that she could conceal her identity from Tonga Dick.

"If you don't mind," Karen said, "I think I shall go to bed now."

Tonga Dick let her go.

CHAPTER VI

In his own room, Dick Wayne found a little fire burning brightly, and he wished belatedly that he had asked Karen if a fire had been laid for her. He did not know that Lilua had put Karen in almost the only room in the house that had no fireplace at all.

A heavy lei of golden ginger blossoms hung on the foot of the bed; the blossoms filled the whole room with a spicy fragrance, heavy and pungent. Instantly Dick knew who had made that lei, and put them there; and for a moment he was troubled. Then, on an impulse, he picked up the lei and went walking through the house. He recognized Karen's room when he came to it by the crack of light under the door.

He knocked and the door was opened.

"Here," he said, pressing the lei into her hands. He was unable to keep a shade of irony out of his voice. "Aloha." He turned and went back to his room. He half expected to hear her door slam behind him, but it did not.

Dick stripped to his shorts and put out the lights. As he flung himself between the cool sheets the many-voiced wind was drowned by the swift rush of rain—first a whisper, then a drumming roar as water beat against walls and casements by sheets and buckets.

The rain was still coming down in torrent upon torrent as he went to sleep.

He was awakened by the touch of a hand upon his shoulder; and, though it was a gentle hand, it was so dripping wet with cold rain that the shock brought him bolt upright. The fire still burned, its slim flames twisting and hissing from the spatter of rain in the chimney, and by its light he saw that Lilua was there.

"What the devil is this?"

"Dick," Lilua said, "you have to get up."

"What's happened? Is there anything wrong?"

"Something is terribly wrong," Lilua said. "Something has happened. It's happened just now—within the last ten minutes."

"Oh, Lord!" He got up then, and turned on the lights.

"I'm sorry to wake you up, Dick—but I tell you, I know."

Dick, pulling on his flannels, looked at her curiously. She had dropped to the floor the huge tie leaf with which she had sheltered her head as she came running through the rain, and her hair brushed wildly about her shoulders. Her eyes were no longer quiet, but alive with a terror she was helpless to control.

In another moment there was a quick flutter tapping at the door and a thin little voice outside was calling, "Mister Dick! Mister Dick!"

THE SYNOPSIS GOSPELS:
MATTHEW, MARK, LUKE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 1:1, 17; Mark 1:1, 14, 15; Luke 1:1-4; Acts 1:1-5.
GOLDEN TEXT—Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—1 Timothy 1:15.

A new year of God-given opportunity with the assurance of His grace and strength for our daily need. Such is the precious gift we hold in our hands as we enter on A. D. 1942.

With the new year, we enter upon a new course of study—carefully planned ahead through 1947, if the Lord tarries. We begin very appropriately with a study of the life of Christ as presented in the first three Gospels, known as the Synoptic Gospels.

"Synoptic" is a combination of two words, meaning "a view together," and refers to the fact that Matthew, Mark, and Luke give us the same general view of Christ, although differing somewhat in their emphasis.

Matthew, writing his Gospel especially to the Jews, presents Christ as King. Mark, for the Romans, presents the Servant. Luke presents to the Greeks the Son of Man—the perfect Man, and John, for the Christian church, reveals the Son of God. But note that all the Gospels are for us, and in them we find the fourfold picture which presents the many-sided glory and beauty of our Lord. Turning to our scriptures we see—

I. The King (Matt. 1:1, 17).

These verses come at the beginning and end of the kingly genealogy of Jesus. It is important that the descent of a king be carefully recorded and studied, for it alone can prove his right to the throne. We know that Israel rejected Jesus as King, but we also know what prophecy reveals that He will one day take the throne of David and reign. Does He have that right?

In Matthew 1:1-17, we have His national and royal descent. Being son of both David and Abraham, He is heir to both the promise and the throne. As King of Israel, there was no need to trace His lineage back further than Abraham through David, but we find that in Luke (2:23-28) the Son of Man is traced back to Adam. Mark has no genealogy for reasons noted below, and John also has none, for the Son of God is eternal, infinite, without need of genealogy.

Turning now to Mark, we find Him presented as

II. The Servant (Mark 1:1, 14, 15).

A servant needs no genealogy, he needs only to be able and ready to work, and that is just what we find in Mark. The account plunges at once into the story of "the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God," who is ready to serve—by life or by death—yes, even by the death of the cross.

The forerunner, John the Baptist, bears his witness. Jesus is baptized. John is imprisoned, and immediately Jesus begins to preach, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel." The key verse of Mark is 10:45: "For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The characteristic words are "straightway," "forthwith," and "immediately." The Greek word thus translated appears about 40 times in the book. The Servant of God went quickly about the Father's business. Christians, can we say the same for ourselves?

III. The Son of Man (Luke 1:1-4).

Luke undertakes to write, under the control of the Holy Spirit, a careful account of the saving work of Christ, but he makes it doubly clear that he writes from firsthand knowledge. "Eyewitnesses" means those who made a personal investigation, hence, those who knew Christ as the Son of Man, the One who became flesh and dwelt among us. "Ministers" means literally those who served under Jesus, His personal assistants; again emphasizing His personal ministry as "the Son of man who is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (as Luke 19:10, the key verse of this Gospel, expresses it).

IV. The Risen and Ascended Lord (Acts 1:1-5).

Christ who was crucified arose a Victor over death and the grave, and ascended to the Father, where He now appears as our Advocate. That does not mean that His work on earth terminated, for we have in Acts what Dr. Morgan fittingly calls "the book of the continued doing and teaching of the living Christ by the Holy Spirit through His body, which is the church."

The Gospels (Acts 1:1) told only that "Jesus began to do and to teach." Acts continues, but does not complete the story. Christ is working today in and through surrendered believers. Will He have liberty to work through you and through me this year of 1942? If so, it is sure to be a happy—yes, a blessed—New Year.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma—

Well I have done a lot of kidding and squawking in my letters but I guess that is all over now. After what them double crossing Japs did there is no longer no funny side to this training and all I want to do is get a crack at them. All the boys feel the same way. Up to the time they heard about them Japs stabbing Uncle Sam in the back under a flag of truce I guess they all felt the same as me that the war was too far away to bother much and that this army training was a pain in the neck. But it woke us all up like no bugle ever did.

I kind of felt that nobody would ever tackle this country on account of we got two big oceans to depend on and all that and I guess I never sweated in a maneuver without saying to myself this is the bunk as Hitler would be crazy to get more trouble on his hands. I never thought that Japan would be even crazier. I hated the hikes, I hated the drills and inspeckshuns and I could not bathe a new crop of corns without burning up inside. But all of a sudden I feel different. Even my bunsions seem patriotic now.

It's the same way all through my outfit. Jeeps who have been squawking eight hours a day look like they become fighting men over night. They know it is not all a lot of foolishness no more and any boy in camp will attack a tank single handed now if you just tell him there is a Japanese doll inside.

As for me personally ma I got a clear picture of what the country is up against for the first time and I wonder now that I did not get the right slant long before this. I guess it was just because I got snatched so sudden from all the comforts of civilian life that I didn't see straight. I was soar over giving up a box spring mattress, a personal alarm clock and the right to do what I pleased. But Emperor Hotsy-Togo or whatever you call him woke me up like nobody's business. I am so sorry now that I am sorry I ever applauded Japanese tightrope walkers.

This war has all of a sudden become a great exciting show, ma. I don't seem just like a optical illusion no more. All the tanks don't seem like they was just a few things being demonstrated by a auto salesman. My rifle witch has just seemed something I wood like to have carried for me by a caddy has all of a sudden become my BUDDY! It's real and human. And my uniform even when it is wet and wrinkled now looks like the grandest uniform anybody could ever climb into. What has come over me I don't know for sure but I credit the Mikadoo with an assist.

I guess you will have to forget about me being home for Christmas. But I know what kind of a mother you are and I guess you feel just like I do about what has happened. I have done a lot of wise cracking about being leased or lent but I don't care where they use me now, so long as it is where I can take a sock at the world's worst enemies of today, the double-talk nations with jab a knife in your kidney while asking what you want for Christmas.

Well, I must close now. Do not worry. Everything will come out all right with the old Stars and Stripes on top.

Your loving son,

Oscar.

P. S.—I serpose pop is trying to get into the army again now. Tell him to forget it and stay home and look out for you as I will do enough fighting for all three of us.

THOUGHT ON FOOD

It is the sad, unlucky fate Of some to have a diet;

Each time they hear a friend's lost weight

They ask him how, and try it.

And yet, however fond and fair Their hopes at the beginning, They almost always find that they're More thinned against than thinning.

—Richard Armour.

"Remember back before social security when people thought the way to be sure of a good living in their old age was to raise a lot of grateful sons and daughters?" asks Merrill Chilcote.

DESERT SONG

In Cunningham,
Said Nazis, running,
There's less of ham,
And more of cunning.

—Richard Armour.

The time to anticipate a war these days is when the peace conversations reach a height.

"Up to Pearl Harbor," said Elmer Twitwell today, "I never thought Orson Welles' famous broadcast would be topped in my lifetime."

Love and Sympathy

Almost everyone can love, but it is not everyone who can sympathize. Sympathy—that divinely tender element—is born of suffering, and is only truly possessed by those who have been educated in the school of trouble and experience. The premium at this school is high, but the lessons taught and learnt there are lasting and eternal.—Jean Maclean.

Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Tinley Park News

Marshall and Henry Olson have enlisted in the United States Naval Service, the former in the navy, the latter in the marines.

Orville Hartman, formerly of Tinley Park, who has been making his home at Monee, has enlisted in the navy and leaves January 5th for training.

Emery Fulton who is located at Fort Knox, Ky., spent the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fulton. Henry Menke took him back to Fort Knox by auto Sunday.

The Tinley Park public school is to reopen January following a vacation during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mager who have been visiting with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mager, returned Sunday to their home in Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Nielsen entertained a large group of relatives over the holidays.

The Vogt family and grand children celebrated Christmas Day with Grandma Vogt.

Martin Miller who recently suffered a stroke affecting the right side, is able to be about again.

Miss Evelyn Swartz has been spending the holidays with relatives in Detroit, Michigan.

The condition of Mrs. Kate Hopman who suffered a stroke some time ago, remains about the same.

The recent Christmas program as presented by the school children of the Tinley Park public school, was one of the best ever presented by the local school. The children were very well versed in their parts and the entire 275 pupils taking part are to be complimented for their very excellent presentation of their parts and for their fine deportment. The teachers also deserve much credit for their excellent work.

The various local organizations contributed liberally to help pay for the cost of the candy, gifts, tree, etc., and the Tinley Park Board of Education extends its appreciation and thanks to the local organizations for their wonderful support.

During the Christmas holidays, an exceptionally well decorated display window was that of the Siemens Farm Implement Sales. The big window showed a miniature farm scene replete with miniature buildings, roads, fields, etc. Toy farm machinery was used to give the display a realistic touch. At night the display was lit up and certainly made a fine appearance.

The village board will hold their first meeting of the new year on Monday night, January 5th.

BREMEN HOME BUREAU
The Bremen Home Bureau met again with Mrs. H. S. Bartholomew Tuesday, December 23 at 1:30 p.m. due to the fact that carpenters were still busy at the Putenar home. This was convenient for Mrs. Bartholomew as she could more easily finish her project on cake decorating. She made numerous designs on a butter cake including a poinsetta and a Christmas tree complete with its decorations. The cake was served with coffee after the meeting adjourned.

Mrs. C. F. Boothe and Mrs. Grant Wortman presented the topic on Conservation of Money and Health by preventing the common cold. They exhibited some very good illustrations and charts of the lungs, ear, nose and throat showing the serious after effects that can result from common colds.

(We were sorry more members were not present to benefit by the presentation of this topic.

IN MEMORIAM

ENDERS LYDIA—In sad and loving memory of our beloved wife and mother who passed away, December 30, 1929.

Remembrance is a golden chain, Death tries to break, but all in vain. To have, to love and then to part Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.

The years may wipe out many things, But this they wipe out never, The memory of those happy days when we were all together.

Thou our hearts may break with sorrow, By the grief so hard to bear, We shall meet her some glad morning In the upper garden there.

LOVING HUSBAND AND CHILDREN

The Orland PTA will hold their January meeting Thursday evening, Jan. 8th at 8 p. m. The topic of the program will be "Commercial Responsibility" and will be in charge of Edward Gee, chairman of Motion Pictures and Visual Education. Some interesting motion picture films will be shown.

The WSCS of the Methodist church held their annual Christmas party Friday afternoon in the basement of the church. A pot luck dinner was served at 1 p. m., and was followed by a short business meeting and a program under the direction of Mrs. George Cox. This was followed by the social hour and the exchange of gifts was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

All members and friends of the Orland Methodist church are invited to attend a Watch Night service at the church on New Year's Eve. ORLAND SCHOOL NEWS

The High School students held their Christmas party Monday evening, Dec. 22nd in the gym. The program consisted of carol singing under the direction of Mr. Owen Harlan and a Christmas play given by members of the dramatics club, entitled "No Christmas for Horace". Each student brought a 10c gift for the grab bag from which he later received a gift. Refreshments were served and other entertainment provided. Those on the committee were: Pete Uthe, Hilda Zerbs, Bob

Parker, Virginia Gee, Pat Dowling, Irvin Dorn, Joan Cole and Edward Gee.

Each room of the elementary grades held their Christmas party Tuesday afternoon, December 23rd. The students assembled in the gym around the Christmas tree and sang carols, then returned to their own rooms and had their programs and refreshments and exchange of gifts.

The girls of the Junior Red Cross are making triple fold bandages, pink and blue baby kimonas, booties and swabs. Miss Ruth Hull is in charge of this class.

Did you know that children in hospitals can use your old Christmas cards? They enjoy cutting the pictures for scrap books. Miss Hull will be glad to accept cards for this purpose.

Do you have any old magazines at your house? The soldiers in army camps are asking for them. This is one way you can help in the American program for defense. Give these magazines to Miss Hull and she will turn them in the Red Cross for distribution to the soldiers.

Happy New Year to All 1942

FUNK'S RESTAURANT—TINLEY PARK, ILL.

The Year Nobody Knows

Here we are again on the threshold of a New Year and wonder what it has in store for us during the next twelve months. During the past twelve months we saw 92.3 per cent of the nations of the world engulfed in the maelstrom of war, yet we say "I Wish You A Happy New Year" in the hope that something may happen to make the year happier than we now anticipate.

The only time that we will ever be able truthfully to say Happy New Year and really feel it will be such, will be the time when a lasting world peace is ushered in.

When this world madness we are in now has ended and peace again reigns, it will be the duty of every church and every institution of learning in every nation on the face of the globe to preach and teach against the folly of war and arouse such a hatred against war that no man will ever again bear arms for any nation. Men must be taught to scrap all armaments, all battleships, submarines, in fact every implement of war and to disband all armies and navies and air forces and to substitute an international court or courts where all national or international troubles could be settled legally same as is done in civil life. If we have disputes in civil life we do not go out and kill each other, but instead go to court.

The question then arises "What can be done if a nation is bull-headed and refuses to abide by an international court decision?"

So long as all nations have no weapons nor soldiers or sailors and no armaments such outlaw nations cannot go to war and must abide by the court ruling.

Heads or rulers of nations must be held personally responsible and should be jailed if they refuse to abide by international law.

You say this is all a fanciful dream and will never come to be a reality. Well then, you can be assured that until the time comes when this so-called dream does become a reality you will see the world undergoing a blood bath same as it is undergoing now, every 25 or 30 years. Seeds of war will bring new wars and so long as nations manufacture implements of war, build battleships, subs, bombers, create armies and navies, they are going to use them. No lasting world peace will ever be ushered in until the plan above outlined is adopted. It will be the duty of all churches and schools in the future to bring about the abolition of all warfare. If the human mind is directed in the right channels it can be done. When this is accomplished we can without any doubt wish each other a truly "Happy New Year."

THE EDITOR.

This is the November safety poster, now being distributed among 40,000 classrooms in Illinois and Indiana by the Chicago Motor Club. The second of the year's series, TEACH YOUR FRIENDS, its actual size is 17" by 23" and the colors are vivid orange, black and white.

"Keep From Between Parked Cars" is the timely word of caution directed to elementary school children on the brilliantly colored red, white and black December poster now being distributed to 40,000 classrooms by the Chicago Motor Club.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, says that lesson sheets, designed to assist teachers with safety instruction, are enclosed with each poster. The lesson sheets are separated into three age groups and prepared to appeal to all age levels.

This poster is the third in the 1941-42 series which is sent to schools in the two states each month as an aid to teachers in their safety instruction, according to Charles M. Hayes, motor club president.

Dear Folks: Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of Boy Scouts of America has been requested by the Government to enlist your aid and that of our boys in the National Waste Paper Conservation Program.

This affords our boys an opportunity: 1: to participate in another important phase of defense program. 2: To secure funds for their treasury. The Plan: 1: Boys to collect newspapers, magazines and other waste material. 2: The leaders and committee are to arrange for sale and disposal of the collection.

It is important that time of collection be arranged by weekly or monthly with some scout. For your guidance: In keeping with the control of the O.P.M., we are assured by Mr. Albert Meisterhiem, Chicago Campaign Chairman that our boys may expect to earn for their treat-40 to 50c per 100 pounds on newspapers and higher prices for magazines.

Here's a parachute jumper we will all welcome as he comes floating down out of December's last dark skies. We hope he is bringing many bright, happy days for you!

You have been good to us in the past, and we want to say "Thanks for everything." Happy New Year, and—we'll be seeing you!

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL

The world is deeply indebted to the Gregorian calendar for the omission of 10 days in the calendar year of 1582 to help catch up with Father Time. We are deeply indebted to the people of this community and it would take about 10 days of the calendar year of 1942 for us to express to each of you personally the gratitude we feel for your kindness to us in 1941. So we are simply sending this "blanket vote of thanks" to our many friends and customers with the wish that with New Year's dawn will come a brighter, happier future for you.

Invite the Club—Serve Apple-Banana Rings
(See Recipes Below)

Dessert Parties

"Come over for dessert" has become one of the most popular ways of entertaining at luncheon or afternoon meetings of bridge or sewing clubs. Your guests will take a light snack at home and come over to your home for dessert only.

Easy? Yes, and a very successful way of starting out your afternoon. So, take out your best recipes for dessert and let's go: Whatever you have must be attractive, so bring out your nicest dessert plates and doilies. First idea on our list today are these broiled Banana-Apple Rings which will polka-dot your table in dessert perfection:

*Broiled Banana-Apple Rings. (Serves 6)

- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 apples, unpeeled
- 3 firm bananas
- Melted butter
- Salt
- Cinnamon

Bring sugar and water to a boil and cook until sugar is dissolved. Core apples and cut crosswise into three thick slices. Add to syrup and cook until tender, but firm. Remove from syrup and place on a broiler rack or pan. Cover apple slices with overlapping slices of bananas which have been peeled and sliced thin. Brush with butter and sprinkle with salt and cinnamon. Broil about 10 minutes or until bananas are brown and tender, easily pierced with a fork. Serve hot with sweetened, whipped cream.

To make your dessert party a double success, serve:

Banana Oatmeal Cookies. (Makes 3 1/2 dozen)

- 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 3/4 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup mashed bananas (2 or 3 bananas)
- 1 1/4 cup rolled oats
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts

Sift together flour, soda, salt and spices. Add sugar gradually to shortening and cream well. Add egg and beat well. Add bananas, rolled oats and nuts and mix thoroughly. Add flour mixture and blend. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto an ungreased cookie sheet about 1 1/2 inches apart. Bake in a moderately hot oven about 15 minutes. Remove from pans at once.

Simply elegant will be your guests' or family's verdict when you serve

LYNN SAYS:

When planning your luncheon dessert parties, be sure to use this season's rich color schemes on your tables and favors and placecards. White with silver, gold, blue, red are tops right now.

If you like three color combinations, there's green, white and gold, blue, white and gold, or white, red and green.

For an elaborate color scheme use the rich tones of violet, emerald, gold, blue and red. This is especially good in a centerpiece.

Bridge placecards may be made out of paper chrysanthemums in your favorite color with the card tilting out of the flower. The white cards may also be decorated with painted flowers, or candy-shaped flowers pasted in the corner. Evergreen, holly, mistletoe, bright berries, pine cones, used alone or with a silver ornament such as a bell on the place card are sure to bring delighted murmurs from your bridge guests.

THIS WEEK'S MENU

- *Recipe Given

an ambrosial concoction so easy to make, it's no trick at all. Here's a dessert that proves you don't have to spend hours of cooking and baking to get a first-rate dessert:

Krispie Cream Roll. (Serves 10)

- 1 1/2 cups whipping cream
 - 8 marshmallows
 - 1/4 cup honey
 - 1/2 cup chopped dates
 - 1/2 cup chopped nuts
 - 3 1/2 cups oven-popped rice cereal
- Whip cream until stiff, reserving 1/4 cup. Cut marshmallows into small pieces, adding them to cream. Add honey, dates and nuts. Roll rice cereal into fine crumbs and add 1 cup of crumbs to cream mixture. Blend well. Spread remaining crumbs evenly on a piece of waxed paper and place cream mixture on top. Mold into a roll and chill for several hours. Slice and serve garnished with remaining whipped cream, chopped nuts or fruit slices or berries.

No list of dessert tempters for parties is complete without super-smooth, delectable ice-box cake. Made with orange flavoring the ice-box cake can be truly provocative in both flavor and appearance and still be easy on the waistlines of your diet-conscious friends:

Orange Ice-Box Cake. (Serves 8.)

- 1 tablespoon gelatin
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 2 cups milk or 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- 2 dozen lady fingers

Soak gelatin in cold water. Scald the milk in a double boiler, mix cornstarch and sugar, and add to hot milk. Add the eggs slightly beaten, combined with cold milk. Cook several minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and add gelatin. Add orange rind and juice. Line a mold with lady fingers, then fill with alternate layers of the cooked mixture and lady fingers. Have a layer of lady fingers on top. Chill in refrigerator overnight. Serve with whipped cream, garnished with orange sections.

Piquant peppermint adds a never-to-be-forgotten flavor to chocolate, and served in quaint tarts, here's a dessert that will mark you as a leader in your crowd:

Chocolate Mint Tarts. (Serves 6)

- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate
 - 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water
 - 3/4 cup sugar
 - 5 tablespoons flour
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 2 egg yolks
 - 2 tablespoons butter
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1/2 cup chopped nuts
 - 6 baked tart shells
 - Sweetened whipped cream
 - 1/2 cup crushed peppermint candy
- Add chocolate to diluted milk in double boiler and heat until chocolate melts. Beat with rotary beater until chocolate is blended with milk. Combine sugar, flour and salt and add gradually to chocolate mixture. Cook until thick and smooth, about 15 minutes. Beat yolks and add to cooked mixture gradually. Cook two minutes longer. Remove from fire, add butter, vanilla and nuts. When cool, pour into tart shells. Top with whipped cream, mixed lightly with the crushed candy.

Something He'd Read

By JAMES FREEMAN

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

"WHAT a break!" Police Officer Spence Tuttle groaned as the short-wave radio in the patrol car began to bark their number. Officer Ken Johnson, Tuttle's companion, smiled sickly. In just five minutes the pair would have been relieved of duty for the night.

Tuttle glanced into his code book, holding it beneath the instrument board light. "Code 76." He repeated the number that had come from the short-wave set. "Murder," he read. "Man shot and killer has escaped."

Tuttle closed the book and grinned. "Well, that ain't so bad. Murders was always my meat and drink."

Johnson, who was driving, spun the wheel sharply. They slued off the main thoroughfare and tore madly along a dimly lighted side street. Five minutes later the car drew up in front of a pretentious-looking apartment, before which a small crowd had gathered. The policemen pushed their way to the front door, ordered the liveried footman who was standing there to allow no one to enter and went inside. A greatly excited superintendent met them in the hallway.

"This way, gentlemen. I thought you'd never come."

He stepped into an elevator, and the officers followed. At the tenth floor they alighted and the superintendent pointed to the door directly opposite. "It happened in there, gentlemen. Harris, Mr. Wainwright's butler, will let you in. It was Harris who spread the alarm."

Tuttle rapped loudly on the door and stepped inside the moment it was opened. Johnson followed. The man who confronted them was

"It's true his brokers have run him ragged by continually calling up for more margin? And it's true that Wainwright was just about out of funds?"

"I don't know. I know he received a good many calls."

"And you know also his brokers called him this morning. You know he had to have money, and he asked you for what you had, promising to double the amount when he paid you back. You gave it to him—probably your whole life's savings. And tonight you discovered he'd lost it all. You were broke, without a chance of getting it back. So you waited for him to come in, intending to kill him, which you did! That's true, isn't it?"

For an instant Harris' eyes wavered. His expression was that of blank amazement.

"Why—why, how did you—that is—" he paused, staring helplessly into the officer's face. There wasn't much he could do. Tuttle had the whole story down to its minutest detail. It was too amazing, too shockingly true to be contradicted without fear of incrimination.

"Self-defense is your best alibi," Tuttle was saying as he snapped on the cuffs. "It's your only chance." His tone was not unkind.

Later, once more in the patrol car, Officer Johnson let out a long whistle. "How," he asked, "in the name of all creation, did you do it out? And me always thinking you were a dumb bloke."

Officer Tuttle grinned pleasantly. This was his moment of triumph, and he took advantage of it.

"I don't know nothin' but what I read in the papers," he grinned.

"Yeah! Well, get it off your chest. It's your night to crow."

Tuttle lighted a cigarette. They were off duty now. "It was like this," he began. "I guessed it!"

"Sure. This evening I read how Wainwright was about ready to blow up, and his borrowing money from his butler seemed like the only logical solution. I took a chance, and made a bulls-eye. I'll bet Harris is still trying to puzzle out how I did it."

"Fine. But you must have had something to arouse your suspicions. You just couldn't accuse a man like that without a bit of evidence."

"Oh, that!" Tuttle flicked his cigarette. "Well, that's where the secret lies. You see, when I examined that screen I found a hole in it, just like Harris said I would. Only the bullet that had made the hole was shot from the inside, as was indicated by the fact that the pieces of wire were forced outward. I figured that Harris had shot that hole through the screen just to make it look like some one standing outside had killed the old man. And when he swore that no one else had entered the room, I knew I was on the right track. That's why I took a chance on hatching up the rest of the story."

"Oh, I see." Officer Johnson spun the wheel and brought the car to a stop before the curb at headquarters. "Well, that just goes to prove what I get for not reading the papers. I knew you couldn't have done it all out yourself."

Foot Deformity Started Vogue of Pointed Shoes

Sometimes fads in shoes have lasted for centuries and probably caused about as much misery as all the wars fought in those same years. Pointed-toe shoes and the high French heels are two of the worst offenders that are still with us.

Pointed-toe shoes came into fashion in the Eleventh century in the court of William II of England, where a nobleman known as Fulk Rechin used them to hide a deformity, and by the reign of Richard II the pointed court slippers were so long at the ends that they were fastened up, out of the way, with light chains to the knees of the wearers.

Pointed-toe shoes have been in and out of fashion ever since. As recently as 1900 and 1905 the "sports" of that bygone era used to be proud of their bright yellow-colored "pig-stickers" that went nicely with their peg-top pants and broad-brimmed sailor straw hats.

By somewhat the same route—via the courts of royalty—came the French heel into the place of fashion which it still holds today.

Catherine de Medici came to the court of the French King Henry II to be his bride. Because she was so short and tiny she brought with her from Italy special shoes with built-up high heels. Because it originally was the mark of a queen, the fad caught on and has stayed with us ever since to the discomfort and torture of millions of women.

Back in the 1600s the fad for French heels became so great that court ladies in France used to wear heels from 6 to 20 inches tall. Even the men took up the high heel fad and short King Louis XIV once decided he would top all his court retinue. He came out on stilts! No one topped that.

Collect in Happiness

Some men follow the vocation they like best and never get rich. They don't seem to care.

Courtesy pays 100 per cent dividends even if you don't get waited on ahead of the man who pounds on the table.

A gem of thought is often impaired by a bad setting.

Or What You're After

It's not much good being a "go-getter" if you don't know where you are going.

Relief At Last For Your Cough

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

"All the Traffic Would Bear"

There was a time in America when there were no set prices. Each merchant charged what he thought "the traffic would bear." Advertising came to the rescue of the consumer. It led the way to the established prices you pay when you buy anything today.

Among our assets we like to count the only one that money cannot buy—your good will. And so at this Holiday Season we extend to you — not as a customer alone, but as a friend, the best of Wishes for the coming Year.
